Coleridge in Wales Festival – this summer

Invitation to Church communities

Can your church community help to host a few people for one night who are undertaking a Welsh cultural adventure that is exploring spirit and community?

The Coleridge in Wales festival will tour all of Wales this summer for 80 days, following the routes of the British poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge when he toured Wales as a young man in 1794 and 1802. Coleridge's profound influence on the Broad Church movement has been largely forgotten, and this summer the Coleridge in Wales adventure seeks to explore its modern offer in Wales and celebrate local communities, imagination, spirit, landscape and hospitality.

Coleridge in Wales is in conversation and working with churches and faith groups of many denominations.

The website for the summer touring festival is here:

Would your Church community be able to provide hosting and hospitality for one night to the journey leader Richard Parry and possibly a few travelling companions? Would you like to organise some activity in response, or take part in the events in some way? Richard is the founder of the Beauchief Abbey Press and last year the Church Times said their latest book was magnificent and that 'no-one seriously interested in the Bible can afford to miss it.'

If you can help, (and if you know someone who might be interested, please share this) please contact the Coleridge in Wales project by email sam@coleridgeinwales.cymru or phone 07974 39 7771
